

Dribble Bib

This is a simple project that is ideal for beginners. If you are new to using an overlocker then this is the perfect way to get to grips with it as you are only sewing three straight seams. This is bib for a toddler aged 18 months plus. It has been designed to be slightly larger than the average bib you'd find in the shops but it still uses hardly any fabric so it is a great scrap buster.

Make them in a variety of fabrics to coordinate with your little one's wardrobe.

You will need:

- A quarter of a metre of fabric such as jersey, cotton or sweatshirt fabric.
- A quarter of a metre of backing fabric such as towelling.
- Two snap fasteners or press studs.
- Sewing machine or overlocker
- Thread

1. Print out the pattern piece and cut it out.
2. Fold your fabric in half. Pin the pattern piece to your fabric with the dotted line along the fold of the fabric and cut around it. Repeat this step with your backing fabric. You should now have two triangles, one in your outer fabric and one in your backing fabric.
3. Pin your outer fabric to your backing fabric with the wrong sides together. Make sure the triangles are the same way round and that the fabrics are aligned.

4. Either using your overlocker or the overcasting stitch on your sewing machine, sew around all three sides of the triangle.
5. If you used an overlocker you will need to fasten off the ends. Thread a needle with the end of the thread. Weave the end in between the two layers of fabric. Pull through and snip off the excess.
6. Attach fasteners to the two top corners of the bib as marked on the pattern piece. The placement of these can be altered to fit your little one.
7. Be sure to watch the video tutorial to help you further. The video goes into detail about how to use Prym colour snap fasteners if you choose to use them on your bib.
